4th Team AFA Minor Semi-Final

The 4th team are playing in the AFA Minor Semi-Final this coming Saturday and it the last chance for an Old Meadonians team to reach a cup final. So if you are not playing then please come and support them at home.

Medical Bulletin

Update on our two broken leg victims. David Stanners has visited Dermot and advises that he is making good progress in his recovery (although I suspect after David's visit he will now have a relapse!). Also David has feedback from Sasha as follows, 'Well, they put some metal inside me and are making me walk, the sadists. Anyway, now racing Aaron Ramsey back to fitness'.

Club Training

Club training takes place each Wednesday at Riverside Lands commencing 7:00pm.

Report of the Month for January

Jon Best for the Vets game on the 23rd January

Saturday afternoon – played for the 2's. Saturday night, had a few beers, after that it's all a bit hazy, but somewhere along the line I must have been hit by a car just like in 'Life on Mars', because on Sunday morning I woke up and went over to the football club to play for the Vets, and somehow I had traveled back in time. In the changing room there was a spritely looking Barry McGuinness, dressed exactly like he was 10 years ago, drainpipe jeans, pastel shirt, brylcreemed hair. Sven Kearney and Neil Hanman had shed the inevitable spare tire that all 40 year olds acquire, and were clearly still in the 1990's. Ducky Salanson is quacking away about some dodgy shenanigans so clearly he is not the married man with 2 kids that I thought he had become.

Any doubt that I had wandered into a bad episode of 'Life on Mars' was put to rest when the door was thrown open and in walked an angry and socially maladjusted middle aged man who likes to throw his authority around. At first glance I assumed that it really was DCI Gene Hunt, given that he was coming out with some horribly misogynistic and homophobic stuff – the sort of language that hasn't been used in polite company since the late 90's. But on a second look I realized that it was only Quinney.

To my amazement, when Quinney names the team it becomes apparent that he plans to play the 'Little & Little' combination of Dwayne and Foxy up front. "But Quinney" I enquire, "don't you realize that everyone plays at least one big striker these days? What about Crouch, Rooney, Torres – don't you think we need some power up front? And whilst we're talking about line-up – are you really planning on playing Kearney in the middle of the field? Don't you realize that even holding midfield players are expected to be able to make a 10 yard pass these days?"

Quinney looks incredulous. "Beste – you screaming fruit – I honestly don't know where you get your ideas from. Everyone knows that Ian Wright and Terry Henry are the best strikers on the planet – and neither of them is more than 5 foot 8? And Steve Kearney is the thinking man's Razor Ruddock – I have always, and will always, build my teams around him. Really – you will be telling me next that there is no place in the modern game for fat goalies like Challice!"

Out onto Riverside Lands we go. It's muddy and bobbly underfoot, cold and with the mist rolling up from the river. Nothing has changed since we won on this very pitch in the AFA Cup Quarter final 9 years ago.

And now, just as then, I am on the bench.

Dermot floats over the ground and marshals the defence just as he did back in the days when he was running the first team, back when he still harboured ambitions of a great banking career, and his boys being signed by Chelsea before they were out of playgroup. Bondy flits like a shadow around the mid-field – elusive, elfin, and utterly ineffectual. And up front Fat Ben stands in the centre circle grunting as the ball sails over him, whilst Dwayne runs around shouting and pointing – mainly at Ben.

Meads are clearly the better side, but despite this Dorking manage to come in 2-1 up at half time, their first a defensive lapse, and their second a speculative punt from distance that sails over Challice as he watches it, routed to the spot, much in the manner of a penguin watching a plane fly over. In between these, Quinney lobs the keeper from 25 yards – and again, it's just like 10 years earlier as he celebrates with a quiet fist pump as everyone else ignores him.

Half time – Quinney's clichéd speech is the same as ever – "The next goal is crucial....". Fortunately we get it when Quinney pushes a defender over, the ref misses it, and Quinney squares to give Dwayne a tap in that even he couldn't miss.

Shortly after though and we are behind again as an even more outrageous shin pad shot from Dorking spoons into the top corner, and the feeling starts to set in that this might not be our day.

For the last 20, Meads are dominant, battering back the Dorking defence, and having a run of 5 corners in succession, each of which is dealt with by the excellent Dorking keeper. And then with the last kick of the game, the ball is swept into the box by Bondy and ricochets to Dwayne's feet for another chance that even he couldn't miss.....but he does.

Out of the Cup, into the bar, not quite sure how we've lost. Young Ed the Greek walks into the bar – the 18 year old who has been thrusting his way into the side recently.....but what's this – he's with his fiancée?

And then I realize – it is 2010 – we haven't stepped back in time at all. It's just that nothing whatsoever has changed. (Except that we used to win back then)!

Team: Challice, Salanson, Jordan, Hanman, Bond, Quinn, Dino, Kearney, McGuinness, Fox, Rhone, Lovell, Best.

Report of the Month for February***

Bebo Brothers 1 and 2 for the 1s game on the 6th February

Report – Part 1:

ITV's Blind Date of the late 80's and early 90's was Saturday night Television at it's absolute finest. Pre Simon Cowell's blockbusting commercial juggernaut of Saturday night entertainment that now comes in the form of X Factor and Britain's Got Talent, Blind Date was, simplistic, striped down, trashy entertainment marshalled exquisitely by the charming queen of Scouse herself, Miss Cilla Black.

Old Meads recession-savaged version of this talent show started a few weeks ago, and like the original version, is being orchestrated by a ginger northerner. For West London's version of Cilla Black please see Nick Jones, a former Old Aloysian and new signing to Old meads first XI this season. NJ has been aggressive in his organisation of this and has reduced the number contestants vying for the female prize from 3 to 2 to increase the competitive edge. Contestant details below:

Andrew Thompson, 27, from Wolverhampton. Known as 'Bebo Brother#1' or the 'Balding, blond shagger of Putney' he is relentless in his pursuit of teenage 'tarts' in around the West London area. His party tricks include 'cocking' goals for the Meadonian 1st team normally after a Nick Jones shot/header is destined for the net (or vice versa) and losing women of decent stock through lewd text messaging.

Lawrie Pointer, 29, from Norwich. Known as 'Bebo Brother#2', 'Ollie' (to all referees in the AFC) and sometimes incorrectly referred to as 'The Suffolk Strangler'. Pointer usually operates further North than Thompson and folklore suggests this is a gentleman's agreement between the two to limit the chances of 'cross fertilisation'. Party tricks include attempting to header the ball on a Saturday afternoon and the occasional episode of begging female bankers for sex on Saturday afternoons instead of playing the first 45 minutes of Meadonian matches.

The lucky woman who gets to choose between these two characters is a 23 year old teacher from the same West London school as Nick Jones and is known only as Amy. The only information given to The Bebo Brothers is Amy's mobile telephone number with the ultimate winner being the first of the two men to sleep with the young beauty.

Thompson, with the advantage of having residence in the local area was given the mobile number after Pointer who wasted no time in arranging the first date. Eyeing a strategic nightcap in West London, Pointer planned to travel the length of London in a show of his interest for the enigmatic female. With Amy confirming her interest and availability with numerous text messages in the days leading up to 'date night' (which was last Tuesday), Pointer was sure of an early victory.

Until disaster struck!.....Pointer received a call at 5pm on the night of the date only 3 hours before the scheduled time of meet and had to endure one of the most embarrassing stand-ups in the history of dating. "Hi Lawrie, urm this is really embarrassing...he,he...but I've got no credit on my Oyster Card and won't be able to make it tonight". Pointer, stunned into silence for a period of what felt like 15 minutes and considering Thompson's banter had his chances ended on the first night, initially desperately offered to pay for a taxi but gaining his composure when it really mattered calmly re-arranged for the week after.

The role of Thompson in this ridiculous and, to be honest, rude excuse making is as yet still unexplained. But there can be no doubt of his involvement to some level. Either way, he takes the lead in this epic dual and is now serving for the match.

Report – Part 2:

The Oxford dictionary defines a tart as a pie that has no top and is filled with vegetables, fruit etc or an offensive word for a woman who dresses or behaves as if she wants to attract men and have sex. For once this week the Old Meadonian's back line were not involved in chasing the above and have become embroiled in a sex scandal that would make Terry and Bridge blush.

The News of the World's major scoop this week reported that Vanessa Peronnecel and her band of tarts regularly scoured the fixture lists to ensure they placed themselves in a local nightclub after a Chelsea home game. Putney Fez Club has also seen a unprecedented rise in 'tart' attendance after the AFC fixture list has been made publicly available via the FA website and consequently, has seen the return of the dark art of 'backdooring' returning to the Football Club. 2nd team skipper Tim Gates has been found to be an exponent in recent times, picking up Thompson's scraps after a foul mouthed tart-based diatribe in the queue following Twickenham.

Thompson, who has been schooled in his trade by the dark art specialists Best and Salanson, regained his composure after Gates' feat to pull off a major coup this week when a young lady (not tart) presented him with a dilemma. Thompson had received the ladies number from androgynous midfielder Nick Jones, and hastily arranged an evening out on Tuesday (the only night he was free). "But i'm already going out with another Meadonian on Tuesday....." Thompson consulted his back-dooring archive to find a text book technique adopted by Best in early 2000's involving the sabotage of public transport. "Tell him you have no cash on your Oyster, he is from Norwich, he won't understand" was the texted reply. Thus, Thompson hosted a home fixture with Amy on Tuesday evening gaining the upper hand on Pointer who was left to his normal Tuesday evening pot noodle.

In true Terry/Bridge style the two played together on Saturday with Pointer oblivious to Thompson's classic back-door actions and were as cohesive as ever (Thompson doing the heading and Pointer doing the running). Alex 'New Bones' Jones was back from his enforced 'J Best back-door six month boot camp' in Devon and was excellent, leading the line scoring two goals and causing problems all day. It was great to see Rory and Paddy back helping out Costello and Glover (who will all be keeping close tabs on the dating shenanigans of the follically challenged pair) and the team were inspired to a 3-2 victory over Parkfield. Excellent performances from all over the pitch against a decent outfit as the 1's prepare a latent challenge for the league (which is still possible).

Reports from Brentford Royal Infirmary of Will "nothing rhymes with Gerrish" Cherish the Gerrish, sustaining a wrist injury whilst contemplating the sordid games of the back two are unconfirmed but he has been spotted sporting a plaster cast on his right arm this week.

Released from bag duty for the ones, it was my pleasure be able to make a somewhat fraught but highly rewarding journey to watch the only Meads team to survive last week's mini-monsoon, the fifths' who did so courtesy of a visit to Old Whitgiftians sylvan fortress where the pitches, based on a porous bed of Wealden chalk, had drained beautifully to give a perfect surface for good football which the two teams duly played. This was a middle of the table six pointer and was throughout evenly and fairly contested. It was also an impressive team performance from the fives, twice coming from behind, in which they could give some of their more illustrious club colleagues a lesson in industry and support for the man on the ball. Agreed if they hadn't fought hard they could have been overrun by hosts who did not let up until we half subdued them in the second half. However, playing with the slope in the first half, Meads were reluctant to get their shots away after falling behind in the tenth minute. Also, their most potent weapon, the long throw of Roger Busby, was wasted due a failure to feed off the stream of balls which were being headed on. Consequently, although shading possession and controlling the midfield, the hosts' lead looked safe until the thirty fifth minute when Nadeem equalised deservedly. By this time Whits' attacks had become sporadic and well contained by Meads' resolute defence but with five minutes to go to the interval, during one of the hosts' few attacks, the referee intervened with a mystery penalty which was emphatically converted to restore the lead to the hosts. The main talking point during the break was a tricky incident on twenty minutes when their chunky midfielder invaded the press box and tried to sort out the press pack single handed. He was ushered back to the pitch after being brought down by a brilliant crash tackle by a brave spectator. Gordon's main contribution had been to silence a large and vociferous section of the crowd with his well known imitation of highland cattle roaring but at half time he just said he wanted more of the same commitment. Up the slope on the restart bets were on the visitors being put under the cosh only for the pundits to be confounded by Meads buckling down, cutting out their hosts aerial route and, during the crucial next fifteen minutes, taking a firm grip on the midfield. The mid air battle was won mainly due to Joe's efforts which was just as well for him because the minute he hit the deck he either got cramp or found he'd got two left feet which tangled each other. So he got back aloft. The midfield were soon putting on pressure with neat one twos and nicely weighted passes into the ample support coming up from behind. Now we turned the screw by bringing on fresh legs in midfield and up front to enfilade Whits with a series of corners. Within five minutes of coming on Osman had brought about a justifiable parity. At this point they still had to be kept out by Steve who came off his line and made a superb reflex save low to his right to push the ball wide of the post for a corner, but with ten minutes on the clock the coup de grace was administered by Mo who capped a fine performance, switching the ball onto his unfavoured left leg and passing it into the bottom corner. The press corps named Mo MoM!!!! (geddit) The hospitality was excellent and Gordon was 'cock a leakie' a hoop when the meal was Scotch pies.
